

THE UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA
Community Lecture Series on Public Health Issues

Is our food safe to eat?

Illnesses from contaminated foods at home and from abroad have been making headlines and leaving many with unanswered questions about today's food safety risks. Attend this free public lecture to learn directly from the experts about this growing public health issue.

Tuesday, January 29, 2008

7:00 p.m.

Masters Hall

The University of Georgia

Center for Continuing Education

1197 S. Lumpkin Street, Athens, GA

Brought to you by UGA's College of Public Health and Biomedical and Health Sciences Institute.

www.biomed.uga.edu

Pose your questions to these Georgia experts....

Michael Doyle PH.D.

Director
University of Georgia
Center for Food Safety

Claude Burnett M.D., M.P.H.

Director
District 10: Northeast
Georgia Division of Public Health